ULSTER COUNTY BOY SCOUT COUNCIL TO BE FORMED

Five District Organizations Planned With Central Authority Here—Men With Ability and Liking For Work to Be Selected.

A meeting which was attended by those interested in the future Boy Scout work in Ulster county was held Monday evening at the office of Ward B. Everett on Fair street. At that time Noble P. Randel, regional field scout executive of the Boy Scouts of America, spoke of a plan for the organization of Ulster county and explained the operation of the plan of organization.

After the plan had been explained the following resolution was adopted: "Resolved, that it is the sense of this meeting that an Ulster County Council of Boy Scouts of America be organized at once consisting of the following five districts: No. 1, New Paltz-Highland and vicinity; No. 2, Kingston and vicinity; No. 3, Saugerties and vicinity; No. 4, Ellenville and vicinity; No. 5, Phoenixia and vicinity."

A meeting will be held within a few days at which time plans for the county council will be presented. Under the plan outlined there will be five district committees in the county, each of which will have a district organization composed of a chairman who will become a member of the executive board of the County Council; a first vice-chairman at the head of the department of administration under which department will be organized committees on troop organization, finance, publicity, camping and civic service; a second vice-chairman at the head of the department of training under which department will be organized a committee of Scout Leaders' Training; a third vice-chairman who will be chairman of the District Court of Honor and a member of the County Court of Honor. There will also be a secretary and deputy commissioner and one representative from each Scout troop.

The county council will consist of a president, first vice president, who is at the head of the department of administration under which head will be organized committees on troop organization, finance, publicity, camping and civic service; a second vice president, who will be at the head of the department of training under which department will be organized a committee of Scout Leaders' Training; a third vice president, who will be chairman of the District Court of Honor and a member of the County Court of Honor. There will also be a secretary and deputy commissioner and one representative from each Scout troop.

In addition to the above there will be members at large, these members at large having no specific work to do, as will the other members of the council. This plan of organization anticipates one job for a man and one man for a job. The very strongest men in the county will be secured and their selection will be made with the greatest care. Each man will be chosen for his fitness for the position which he is to occupy. The thoroughness with which the organization is set up bespeaks its success.

At present there are 21 other such organizations in New York and New Jersey, a like organization having been perfected last month in Orange county with 127 of the leading citizens of the county making up the personnel. General M. F. Davis is president of the Orange county organization.

NEW CARNIVAL OPENS WITH LARGE ATTENDANCE.

The circus was crowded at every performance and was enjoyed by all. The side shows were well attended. There are over fifty concessions with this show, and four loads of wild animals. The carnival will be here for the week, and is under the auspices of the Excelsior Home Company, No. 4.

A. F. OF L. FROWNS ON SHIP SUBSIDY

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Cincinnati, O., June 13.—Ship subsidy legislation pending in congress and backed by President Harding and his administration, became the object of vigorous attack by organized labor at today's session of the American Federation of Labor's annual convention.

Condemning it by resolution as "injurious to public interest and destructive of the nation's aspirations as a sea power," delegates launched into lengthy debate on the merits and demerits of the measure.

BIG TREE DOWN ON CROWN STREET

Ancient Maple In Front Of Lawton Home Among Many That Big Wind Topped Over Here—Men Kept Busy Repairing Broken Wires.

The little block on Crown street between John and North Front streets is at all times a busy one these days, but on Monday afternoon it was trebly so when the final swish of the tail of the tornado that did such damage throughout the state blew over an immense maple tree in front of the property of William Lawton, near the corner of John street.

Nor did this great tree succumb without tremendous resistance. About three o'clock in the afternoon, William Von Berg of the Advance Restaurant while at his residence on Crown street across from the Lawton home, heard a crunching sound just as the wind was at its highest, and going to his window saw that the tree was breaking toward the Lawton home. He hurried across the street to notify the family and reached there before the tree finally fell against the house, possibly a period of three or four minutes. Undoubtedly the slowness of the tree's fall was due in part to the support it had from the network of electric light and telephone wires passing through its branches. It fell against the wing of the house so easily as not to crack a single pane of glass in a dormer window against which it rested. It did do some damage to a chimney and the roof.

Neither Mr. nor Mrs. Lawton were at home at the time so the neighborhood got busy telephoning, where the lines were not interfered with and it was scarcely ten minutes before the police force was on duty to protect passers-by and especially the school children from possible damage from broken wires. The Kingston Gas and Electric Company was on hand to look after its wires; the telephone company was there for the same purpose; and the board of public works appeared to look after the taking down of the tree, which was and is finally being done by the city force.

Between the hours of 3 and 7 o'clock, the old electric light pole, supporting the arc light at the corner of Crown and John streets was taken down, a new pole put in its place, the wires which were also down as far as Green street on John street, were replaced and a temporary electric light was ready for service at that corner when it was time for the lighting of our streets. Before dark the tree had been taken off the building and enough of the big branches removed to quite clear up the place; very quick work on the part of all cooperating.

The wind also blew out a large glass in the door to the hallway in the center of the Michaels store building, 53-55 North Front street. Scattered about the upper part of the city are scores of very old maple trees, landmarks, that are liable to be blown over if struck by a gust of wind such as the one that wrecked the one on the Lawton property.

A poplar tree on the premises of J. DePuy Hasbrouck, 147 Main street, was also blown over, falling over into the yard of Mr. David Relyea, knocking off a tile top from a chimney in its descent. In the yard was a lawn swing in which Mrs. Relyea sits afternoons of nice days reading but luckily she left the swing Monday afternoon just before the time of the falling of the tree, as the swing was crushed by the tree.

Traffic was blocked for a time on Clinton avenue near Franklin street by a tree that had been blown over by the wind.

A large maple was broken off at the corner of Rogers street and Broadway and big limbs fell in many parts of the city while the pavements were covered with twigs and small branches displaced by the wind.

The gas and electric company and the telephone companies were seriously inconvenienced by broken circuits caused by falling trees and rushed repairs with all possible speed.

C. OF C.'S WORK UNOSTENTATIOUS

Welding of Memberships Into Harmonious Working Unit Goes on Quietly With Idea of Increasing Value to Community.

The value of the Chamber of Commerce to Kingston depends almost entirely upon the interest its consistent members take in its endeavors.

Many men and a number of ladies are not alone paying their dues but are giving largely of their time and these without exception believe in the Chamber of Commerce idea. Kingston has abundant resources along industrial and residential lines and it is the idea of the chamber to develop these in a careful and sane manner.

At this time we wish to show by figures what three new industries, brought here by the chamber, mean to Kingston.

The Apollo Magneto Corp.

Present number of employees.....40
Weekly payroll.....$1,000.00
Employees brought to Kingston.....12
Number renting homes.....14
Number who have purchased their own homes.....2

The Kattermann & Mitchell Co.

Present number of employees.....114
Weekly payroll.....$2,000.00
Employees brought to Kingston.....20
Employees brought to Kingston who are renting homes.....16
Employees brought to Kingston who have purchased homes.....4

L. Barth & Son, Inc.

Present number of employees.....41
Weekly payroll.....$1,800.00
Employees brought to Kingston.....8
Employees brought to Kingston who are renting homes.....3
Employees brought to Kingston who have purchased homes.....5
New home owners count in a city's growth, as does also a combined weekly payroll of over $5,000.

We believe that these figures answer very well the often heard question as to what the Chamber of Commerce is doing.

Other plans are now being developed which will be of great value, and also a great drawing card, to Kingston.

This is not an idle promise. And we are sure that when the right moment comes to make a public announcement of this that you will be further convinced of the value of the Chamber of Commerce of Kingston.

Every citizen of Kingston will soon be given the privilege of becoming a member of this organization.

At a meeting held Monday evening, ward captains were appointed to take charge of securing members for the coming year.

When you are interviewed make it easy for those who are giving their time from their own work by saying, why, sure, I will be glad to join again this year, and sign at once on the dotted line, and better yet, accompany your signature with a check.

Start now and become a booster for Kingston.

Ernest Robinson of the trades and labor congress of the Dominion of Canada, pleaded the necessity of banding its political strength with the voting power of American women.

The convention recessed shortly before 1 p. m. until tomorrow, which has been set aside as "Child Labor Day."

FAZIO WORKS TO KEEP BOTH WIVES

Finds It Hard To Send $10 Monthly To One In Italy As Directed By Judge Fowler—Millonig Pleads Guilty.

An adjourned session of county court will be held on Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock when it is expected one or more persons who have been indicted by a grand jury will plead guilty.

Frank A. Fazio who was indicted several months ago for bigamy, having a wife in Italy and one in the town of Saugerties, was asked Monday to explain to Judge Fowler why he had failed to carry out the terms of a suspended sentence imposed last January. A condition when Fazio was let go then was that he send at least $10 each month to his wife in Italy and to send monthly receipts to District Attorney Traver showing that he had sent the money.

District Attorney Traver told the court that he had received two receipts, being of $5.50 each, since last January. Fazio explained that he sent all that he could. That he had been in jail for a long time and had gone in debt. When he came out and went to work for the West Shore railroad at Ravena his wages had been garnished and out of what was left he paid his board and kept his family here. The debts had about all been paid he said and he would do better now. Judge Fowler taking Fazio's statement into consideration held the case open until the September term of court, in the meanwhile Fazio to send $10 each month to his wife in Italy and ordered to send post office or express money order receipt each month to District Attorney Traver.

H. Millonig who pleaded guilty to having liquor in his possession in violation of the Mullen-Gaze act was fined $200 which was paid and bail bond cancelled.

RECEPTION TO REV. LUCAS BOEVE

New First Dutch Pastor Begins Duties With Pledge of Congregation to Support His Ministry—Old Breach in Ranks Healed.

The chapel of the First Reformed Dutch Church was filled to capacity Monday evening by members of the congregation and the city clergy in honor of the new pastor and his wife, the Rev. and Mrs. Lucas Boeve, for whom a reception was tendered by the consistory, the Ladies' Aid Society and the Hon. Rietta Wynkoop Guild.

Those who assisted the Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Boeve in receiving were Dr. and Mrs. E. E. Billings, Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Rose, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence H. Schoonmaker, Mr. and Mrs. James E. Low, Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Boice, Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. Edson, Arthur Ellison, Mrs. W. D. Delaplane, Mrs. William X. Fossenden, Mrs. Phoebe Roosa, Miss Frances J. Osterhout.

Following the reception, Superintendent of Schools Myron J. Michael, who acted as master of ceremonies, called the assemblage to order and introduced the Rev. Wilbur F. Stowe, pastor of the Reformed Church of the Comforter. Mr. Stowe referred to the fact that for seven or eight years after coming to Kingston in 1906, he and Mrs. Stowe had been members of the First Dutch Church, his membership continuing until he became pastor of his present charge, and the people of the First Dutch had a warm welcome first extended to him by Mr. Van Slyke through the years which he had met with the congregation both in the chapel and church, the pleasant relations had continued and he felt that he was looking in the faces of real friends.

The personnel of the Classis of Ulster had changed greatly in the past sixteen years, he said. The changes of life come suddenly and when one worker passes on another rises to take his place.

A plan had been under consideration for some time, said Mr. Stowe, to consolidate the Classis of Ulster and the Classis of Kingston under the name of the Classis of Ulster, which should be attached to the Particular Synod of New York, and he had just received word that the General Synod now in general session had voted for such consolidation.

The action looking to consolidation had been approved unanimously by the Classis of Ulster and the Classis of Kingston. Herebefore the Classis of Ulster had been within the Particular Synod of New York, and the Classis of Kingston had been within the Particular Synod of Albany, and the consolidation also had met with unanimous approval on the part of both Particular Synods.

Mr. Stowe referred to the absence of the Rev. Dr. Frank B. Seelye, pastor of the Fair Street Reformed Church, who is attending the General Synod of the Reformed Church and in welcoming the Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Boeve he would therefore speak both for the Classis of Ulster and the Classis of Kingston. He knew the church had made no mistake in calling the Rev. Mr. Boeve to the pastorate because of the highly esteemed remarks which had been made concerning him by many ministers who had known him for years, and in welcoming him to the church, a representative church of the denomination and possessing a magnificent history, he felt that through Mr. Boeve's leadership the Kingdom of God would be conserved and the church and its people would prosper.

Personally, said Mr. Stowe, he had been a member of the church long enough to know that the people would hold up the hands of the minister, standing behind him in all his work and rendering every help and at all times remembering him in their prayers, and he was sure the welcome now being given him would last throughout his entire ministry.

Freight Train Crashed Into Wagon and Truck

Flatbush Avenue Crossing Scene of a Near Tragedy—Edward Hutton Had Narrow Escape From Death When His Wagon Was Crushed Into Splinters—Craft's Big Auto Truck Wrecked—Flagman Raised Gates Too Soon.

A south bound freight train on the West Shore railroad crashed into E. S. Craft & Sons' big white truck, wrecking it, then struck a horse and wagon driven by Edward Hutton of Ponekhockie street, smashing the wagon into kindling and hurling Hutton out on his head on the Flatbush avenue crossing about 9 o'clock this morning. The horse was not injured. The near tragedy was caused by the flagman on duty at the crossing raising the gates too quickly and allowing the truck and wagon to proceed across the tracks.

Craft's big truck was driven by Clarence Keyser of Pearl street and was loaded with about $500 worth of groceries to be delivered at East Kingston. Keyser had driven up to the crossing but before he could drive over the tracks the gateman lowered the gate to allow the switch engine to pass.

About the same time Hutton, who is employed at the Devo cider mill, drove up to the crossing and halted his horse alongside the truck. After the switch engine had passed over the crossing the gateman raised the crossing gates and Keyser and Hutton started to drive across.

The big truck got under way quicker than the horse and wagon and was upon the tracks when the south bound freight train came thundering along. Keyser happened to glance up and saw the onrushing freight. He said, when seen afterward, "I stepped on the gas trying to get clear and it was lucky I did, for the engine struck the rear of my truck, cutting it cleanly off and hurling the forward end of the truck off the tracks."

As the big auto truck was knocked off the tracks the train plunged into Hutton's wagon, smashing it into bits and hurling Hutton, who had no time to jump, out of the wagon. He landed on his head just clear of the freight train which saved him from being ground to pieces under the wheels of the fast moving train.

Those who witnessed the collision rushed to the scene and Hutton was picked up and rushed to the office of Dr. C. F. Keefe on the Strand where his injuries were attended to. No bones were found broken but he was badly shaken up and bruised.

The horse he was driving escaped unhurt. As the train crashed into the wagon the whistle tree and shafts broke allowing the horse, which had not stopped, to continue on over the tracks to the other side of the road where the animal halted and was caught by a man.

The wagon was a complete wreck. The big auto truck was also badly damaged having been cut almost in half.

The fact that Keyser saw the approaching train as quickly as he did and made an effort to clear the tracks ahead of the train was what probably saved his life as otherwise the front end of the truck would have received the full impact of the collision. Keyser was still clinging to the steering wheel after the truck had been hurled off the tracks.

Aside from bruises and a bad shaking up Keyser apparently escaped uninjured. Just how badly Hutton is injured will not be known until later. The load of groceries was ruined and lay scattered all over the tracks and nearby vicinity where they were hurled.

Mr. Craft of the firm of Craft & Son, when seen later, said that had he visited the scene with railroad officials after the accident and that the railroad had agreed to make good all damages.

That Keyser or Hutton were not killed is considered a miracle by those who saw the collision.

COAL INDUSTRY MUST BE REFORMED, DECLARES SMITH

Director of U. S. Geological Survey Scores Both Operators and Labor—Lower Wages But Steadier Employment Essential—Threat of Government Operation.

New York, June 13.—The nation's coal bill includes too much unemployment and too little productive work, representing wastefulness of both capital and labor, George Otis Smith, director of the United States Geological Survey, declared here today at the meeting of the public committee on coal.

"To make possible the cheaper coal that our American industries need and also the larger earnings that both capital and labor deserve, the coal industry must reform itself," Smith said. "Not the least essential factor in this reform must be the co-operation of labor. The coal miner cannot be put in a privileged class any more than the so-called coal baron. The world owes the coal miner a living only as he earns it, but he certainly should have a better chance to earn it—a longer year and a longer day. Lower wages but more pay—less per ton or per day, but more tons and more days in the year—is the equitable way of deflating coal prices."

Smith charged the coal operators with a "shortsighted policy of opposition to public inquiries into the facts of the industry."

"The public is suspicious about everything related to the coal business," he exclaimed, "and the more grudgingly the facts are made known, the more suspicious the public becomes. Eventually the facts will be disclosed, whatever the opposition."

"In his appeal last month for the co-operation of moral forces and good will in the coal business, Secretary Hoover talked plainly to the coal producers and said that if our coal industry does not govern itself, it will surely be governed by the public. Just now the public is asking for facts."

Abernethy for $5,720.

ing over the audience he had come to the conclusion that the question of how to secure larger church attendance Sunday mornings, which was a subject of deep consideration everywhere, had been solved, and he would suggest that Ladies Aid Societies announce that they would serve ice cream at Sunday morning services. He had read many suggestions on how to increase church attendance but he could not recall that this suggestion ever had been made, but should it be adopted he was certain it would find favor and personally he would be willing to help.

He supposed, he said, he was asked to speak because he was the oldest member in years. There were two older members—Miss Mary Van Leuven and Miss Katherine Forsyth—but they were older only in regular church attendance.

The judge referred to the fact that today Rutgers College, of which he was honored by being one of the trustees, was to confer the degree of Doctor of Laws on his old friend, Elihu Root, and he had been commanded by the president of the college to be present at the ceremonies because he was a trustee. But he had replied that while Root deserved all the honors that could be bestowed both in this world and the next, he deemed it his duty to remain in Kingston to take part in the welcome which the First Dutch Church was giving its new pastor.

On Sunday morning, said the judge, Mr. Boeve had incidentally made a statement which had greatly impressed him. In speaking of the influence of individuals, churches, communities and nations, he had asked: Suppose the service which this church had rendered to the community should be eliminated, what would have been the result in Kingston? For more than two hundred years, said Judge Clearwater, the First Dutch Church had been Kingston. The entire life of Kingston during that time revolved around this church from 1659 to 1857, and nothing was done in Kingston in all that time unless the First Dutch Church took the initiative. Even to the present day the church had taken the initiative in every important undertaking. It was the mother of twenty-seven churches, all of whom proudly acknowledged her motherhood.

The announcement which had been made by the Rev. Mr. Slove that at last the Classis of Ulster and the Classis of Kingston were to be consolidated was news to him but it was most gratifying as it was to Mr. Slove. There never should have been a division, which arose over an incident now forgotten and unknown save to Miss Van Leuven, Miss Forsyth and himself. It was more than coincidental that with the installation of the Rev. Mr. Boeve the two Classes should be joined in one big Classis, and it bespoke for him, for this congregation, for each church in the new Classis of Ulster, for the Reformed Church in the Hudson river valley and for the growth and future strength of the Reformed Church in America. He thanked God that the trouble which originated in 1852 at last had been forever settled and forgotten and a triumphant, reunited Reformed Church would march onward to a career of successful work in this entire section.

With Dutch thoroughness, which is characteristic of a Dutchman when he is in earnest, the church had thoroughly inquired concerning Mr. Boeve and his antecedents, and everywhere it had found the same answers to its inquiries, that he was a man of great spirituality who had discovered that the duties of a pastor had not ended when he prepared and delivered two sermons on Sunday and conducted the weekly prayer meeting. Mr. Boeve had proved himself a pastor who believed that he should be found where a pastor should be.

Judge Clearwater said he had written to a friend who long had been connected with the Department of State and was president of a large corporation who for many years had personally known Mr. Boeve, and finally had asked him: "What are this man's faults?" And he had received the reply promptly: "I have been unable to discover any." But, added the judge, Mr. Boeve had come to a congregation which was the reverse.

Nothing ever had shaken the loyalty of the congregation to this church. Whatever differences may have arisen during 293 years, and it would be miraculous if differences did not arise, there never had been failure of loyalty to the church, and the present gathering demonstrated the congregation still was loyal and always would be.

It had been said that this congregation was difficult of approach, cold and reserved. "We are not a demonstrative people," said Judge Clearwater, "because nearly everyone in this congregation has either Dutch or Huguenot blood in his veins, and neither the Dutch nor the Huguenots are demonstrative. Yet they are a loving people, and we love this man and this woman, and I don't know of anyone who has so quietly and closely entered our hearts as they have. Because we are not demonstrative, they may not think we are close to them, but we know they are close to us."

"I cannot say I exactly represent the pagan element of the congregation, but I do represent the worldly element. You, Mr. and Mrs. Boeve, have received a rich spiritual welcome from Professor Michael and Dr. Stowe. Now you get a welcome from the other crowd through me, and I want to say you are welcome to the First Dutch Church."

Judge Hasbrouck's Welcome. Judge G. D. B. Hasbrouck said he always had the misfortune to follow Judge Clearwater and generally found that when Judge Clearwater had finished speaking there was nothing left for him to say. But he had been amazed to hear the judge talk about ice cream in the way he had done, and it was quite evident that Judge Clearwater was on the same plane with Samuel Butler, Arnold Bennett and Bernard Shaw. He could not promise whether he would follow him in his ice cream crusade because, to tell the truth, he knew ice cream did not agree with some people. But he had been deeply interested in what Judge Clearwater had said about the reason for his absenting himself from the Rutgers College commencement, and he wanted to assure Judge Clearwater that he would have been infinitely more comfortable had the judge gone there; as it was now, there was nothing left for him to say.

Nobody needed to commend Mr. Boeve to him, said Judge Hasbrouck, because for many years and until he recently was called to his fathers there had been among the residents of Tarrytown one William H. Gibson, a personal friend of Mr. Boeve and of himself, and he knew how Mr. Boeve had appealed to the sterling and rugged honesty of Mr. Gibson, and any man who could hold the friendship of William H. Gibson was good enough for him.

"I am proud of the Huguenot blood that is in me," said Judge Hasbrouck. "Judge Clearwater has more Dutch blood than Huguenot, but I believe sometimes that he has more Huguenot blood than I have, because he is a member of the Huguenot Society and I am not."

Judge Clearwater has told something of this church, but there is an element in the church of which he has not told Mr. Boeve anything. There is an element in the church which Judge Clearwater has not represented to Mr. Boeve. Do I appear cold and distant like Judge Clearwater? Do I lack the warmth which he intimates is lacking in him? We want people to understand that when we greet them it is with warmth and affection. And we do greet them and that is the feeling we have.

This Reformed Church is a great church and it has done a great work, but it is not enough that it had pastors who could correspond with George Washington, because the church today has an important work to do that never before confronted it, and I appreciate the fact that Mr. Boeve comes here as a religious duty to do that work. He comes here not for a play day or a holiday. He comes here because he is needed.

"Do we need him here? I am not a deep student of church affairs and possibly I cannot say. Judge Clearwater has represented all the evil in the church and all the good, so there is nothing left for me to do except to represent myself. Each one of us ought to take up with Mr. Boeve the work that ought to be done and to help him do it. There are men who are not attending church or taking any part in church work who ought to be in church and active at that and it is up to us to go out and get them and see that they do help in the great work which the church is carrying forward today—necessary work in which every God-fearing man and woman ought to join."

"This is a great welcome to any minister. There may be nicer people in the United States or somewhere else in the world, but if there are, I don't know them. Nowhere are people more sensitively religious, of more generous hearts and anxious to serve because they believe in their God and in their fellow men than in this church. We owe a debt of gratitude to the consistory for the time they have taken to select a pastor and for the wise selection they have made. We as a people ought to give Mr. Boeve square deal, to stand by him. He becomes our leader. It is up to us to let him plan and then to stand behind him to a man and do what he commands. The hearts of this people is a warm heart, and it is as open to the Boeves as it ever was open to anyone in the history of the church. Mr. and Mrs. Boeve, we welcome you."

Professor Michael's Welcome.

Superintendent Michael said that when he came to Kingston twenty-seven years ago he had received so cordial a greeting that he had forgotten the way home and decided to stay here; and he hoped this would be the experience of Mr. and Mrs. Boeve in the coming years, and he hoped their life would be such as they moved about in the city that the same friendships would come to them as had come to him. To that which had been said already he could only add, "Welcome, Mr. and Mrs. Boeve."

Mr. Boeve's Response.

Mr. Boeve in reply gave a brief talk which was marked by its wit and its practical common sense. In beginning he said that he could not exactly disagree with Mr. Stowe should have referred to his having been called on to lead in speaking of the evening after having been called on last week to deliver the charge to the people at the installation ceremonies unless he had in mind the story of a certain gathering of young men at college who were interrupted in their assembly by a professor who determined to convert the meeting into a prayer meeting and asked one young man, "Will you lead?" to which the young man replied, "No, I just desert."

"On behalf of himself and Mrs. Boeve and their three children, he thanked the congregation and the clergy for their warm welcome. "You have said it with flowers," he said. "You have said it with words, and now Judge Clearwater says you are going to say it with ice cream. You have opened up your homes and your hearts, and we appreciate it. One thing a minister appreciates more than all else is to have the people open their hearts. I know that I am going to be happy here. I know it is a big task that confronts a minister, but as I said Sunday morning, I am more hopeful of the church and its opportunities for success than I was when I began my ministry sixteen years ago, more hopeful even in spite of discouragements. For I am convinced more than ever that this is a loyal people, and loyalty is what the church demands today."

Before closing, Mr. Boeve took the audience into his confidence as to some of the phases of a minister's routine work and the demands on his time, but the general ministerial attitude, he said, was best expressed by a celebrated pulpit orator who found it necessary to lock himself in his study when giving the study-period needed in the preparation of his sermons and who gave instructions that he was not to be disturbed; but added, "If any little child comes and knocks at the door, let him in." While the minister would like to work without interruption, he knew that there might be a call on him at any time for assistance, and he typified the call for help by a little child.

Entertainment Features.

The attractiveness of the chapel was enhanced by the liberal use of baskets of flowers which were suspended from the semi-circular balcony and by a profusion of flowers which were banded across the entire front of the chapel.

During the evening, Harry Clearwater, the well-known baritone soloist of the church, sang "Out of the Night That Covers Me." Mrs. Johnston, the soprano soloist of the church, sang "The Slave Song," and for an encore sang a soft southern lullaby. Mr. Hawkesley, the well-known tenor, sang "Within the Garden of My Heart," and for an encore sang "Such a Little Fellow," and Mr. Shuttles rendered a piano solo. All the musical numbers were rendered with great effectiveness that was much appreciated. The vocalists in each case being accompanied by Mrs. William S. Eittinger.

At the close of the program, refreshments were served.

PROCESS SERVER CREATES UPROAR

By Telegram to The Freeman.
New York, June 13.—Heroine in bath, missing necklace worth $2,750, maid screaming "Bandits," process server with "papers" being arrested, uproar in fashionable apartment house, all combined today to make the ingredients of a popular story for Robert W. Chambers; the novelist, and it all happened in Mr. Chambers' own home.

The process server conveyed a summons in a suit against Mrs. Chambers for damages alleged to have been sustained by a boy who was run over by her automobile several months ago.

The man brushed by the servant, who protested that her mistress was taking a bath, dashed upstairs and met Mrs. Chambers just as she was leaving the bathroom, undraped. Throwing the summons at her, he ran down stairs.

Mrs. Chambers said that after he left she missed her necklace.

"Community Meal Planning" will be the subject of nutrition meetings which have been arranged by the Ulster County Home Bureau to be held at New Paltz on Thursday, June 15, and at Milton on Friday, June 16.

Both communities have been studying the nutrition course and Home Bureau members at each place are taking a deep interest in these as well as other matters which the Home Bureau is taking up.

This afternoon the first of a series of five or six lectures on Nutrition and Health was held at West Shokan.

GRAY TRELAIN, BLACK SATIN

Gray trelaine is used to fashion this clever feminine version of a suit, while black cire satin adds distinction to both skirt and coat. The side panel and novel collar are notes for fashion devotees; a crepe de chine blouse of self-color completes the costume.

IN THE STYLE PROCESSION

Fancy and Color Combinations Extend to Cotton Frocks for Porch and Morning Wear.

The fancy and color combinations so much in evidence this spring extend to simple cotton frocks for porch and morning wear.

The lavender shades, green, blue, including periwinkle, which have had so much publicity, and the vivid dandelion yellow which is now occupying a prominent place in the style procession, are all featured in gingham, with rather small checks preferred. White and one of the colors are usually combined in a small check. Of course, the vivid Scotch plaid gingham is still used, especially for children, but the preference is for two-tone effects in the small patterns.

Linen is to be worn more this season than for several years, due primarily to the fact that it is more reasonable in price, but an all-linen frock does require a great deal of pressing and laundering to keep it in presentable condition, as all linens rumple very easily. When combined with gingham a more practical frock is the result.

One smart little gingham frock seen recently, in a yellow and white check, was trimmed with laced insertions formed of white organdie set lengthwise of the skirt so as to give it a panel effect, the waist being similarly treated. A row of the insertion trimmed each outer sleeve and the neck was finished with an organdie frill.

Organdie is a fabric that promises to have a strong vogue for summer and if a good quality is selected an organdie dress will give splendid service. It is easy to launder, requiring no starch, and needs but little in the way of trimming.

HAVE LAMPS FOR EVERY ROOM

Decorations Available in Great Variety; Ostrich Feathers Among the Latest Styles.

Every room nowadays has its lamp. In the living room there is a wide choice for table or floor lamps. Wrought iron, mahogany and polychrome effects in either metal or wood form most of the lamp standards. French, Gothic, English, Spanish and Italian styles are all good for bridge, piano and junior lamp effects.

As for shades there is infinite variety, too. Glass, parchment, silk, georgette, wicker and even charming ostrich feathers are seen. A word about these new feather shades. Instead of being the fluffy affairs formerly constructed of the curly ostrich tips for boudoir lamps, these are long feathers, with the center ribs forming the sections of the lamp shade. A rose feather shade, for example, had each feather where it joined the next outlined with narrow black feather trimming, and the light shining through just the delicate feathers applied to a frame is indescribably lovely.

Smart Traveling Coats.
Smart traveling coats cut on very full lines are developed from grizzled woolsens, usually in green tones as well as coarsely woven cheviots notably in yellow shades. Zenana oftentimes is used as a lining for these coats. Beige and sand woolsens in rough weaves are used for street wraps made on straight lines. Colored embroidery and fringe girdles are a means of relieving the severity of the plain woolsens.

Old Talcoteles.
An old talcotele which has been through around the edge of the table can be made into an attractive lunch cloth. Cut it off where it is worn and use the outside part to make a hem between two and three inches wide, slip the edge of the cloth between the two edges of the fold and hem.

The Principal Inducement.
"What tends most into the far corners of the world?" asks one of the magazines. Our guess is that it is the hope of seeing their names in the newspaper headlines.

THE PARIS GOWNS

Fashion Hints From France May Be Used to Advantage.

Many Embroideries Used on Afternoon and Evening Dresses—Suits Also Embroidered in Places.

Dresses from Paris have so many fine points of distinction that it is interesting to follow their devious and various ways, observes a Paris fashion writer in the New York Times. Perhaps the silhouette does remain practically the same, but that only increases the expression of loveliness of detail.

From many of the French gowns, which are perhaps too exaggerated or too elaborate for actual American wear, one can derive hints and notes that only go to make one's own gowns more beautiful.

There are many embroideries on all the French gowns, both those for afternoon and those for evening wear. Even the suits are embroidered in places.

Gown of Plain and Printed Chiffon.

In fact, this is the trimming, above all others, which the French have decided to use for the adornment of the spring gowns.

For evening, there are numberless crystal embroidered motifs, and many of these are being used on all-white gowns, while others are placed in conjunction with very brilliantly colored chiffons and crepes and satins.

The girdles and waistline arrangements continue to be important features, and whenever the gown is quite plain it is bound to have some embroidered motif placed at the waistline in some spot, even when the trimming does not extend all the way around.

The necklines here, as a rule, are rounded and are trimmed with scalloped collars finished with rows of knots. These are extremely youthful arrangements which have a strong appeal for those of a more youthful type. Many of the sleeves end at a point just below the elbow. Often the long and wide sleeves are faced with brightly contrasting colors of silk, and some of them are cut in two long points to resemble the shaping of a swallow's tail.

CREPE DE CHINE FOR LINING

Material Much in Demand for Use in Suits and Coats; Silver and Tan Colors.

From the point of view of the silk market, crepe de chine appears to be very important, for both coat and suit linings. Buying is said to be spasmodic, and of a hand-to-mouth character, but a source of some satisfaction to the trade, as compared with the dress silk business.

Colors wanted in crepe de chine and other fabrics are almost exclusively silver and tan. This latter shade embraces a range from bisque to the tanish brown, and takes in shades like Long Beach, meadow lark, peanut, putty and others in that range.

This bears out the assertions of manufacturers who, while showing high-colored linings in their model garments, report their being ordered in the plain shades mentioned above. High-colored silk linings are being used in three-piece costume suits mostly, when the upper part of frocks are of the same silk.

Panel and Eyelet Insets.

A showing of summer frocks features handkerchief linen and organdie with panels and insets of eyelet embroidery. The frocks are in the panel shades and white and on them rich and heavy eyelet embroidery is most effective. Lace insets and panels, as well as lace-edged girdles and flounces, also are to be noted. Except that often the sleeves are a mere pretense and the waistline remains long, these flounced and eyelet-embroidered frocks are a hark back to the summer gowns of by-gone days.

Sentiment and the Law

By DOROTHY WHITCOMB

Copyright, 1922, Western Newspaper Union.

"But law and sentiment are the same thing," said Rogers the old corporation lawyer. Somebody had been lamenting the average jurymen's inability to bring in a verdict upon the evidence alone. "Sentiment is law," Rogers repeated. "It is law in its embryonic state, uncrystallized, but often better law than written codes."

"Do any of you remember the Bright murder trial of the late seventies?" he continued, looking round at us. "No? Well, there have been many murders since then, and doubtless it was not of epoch-making importance. Yet I was led to undertake the defense of Howard Bright through sentiment."

"It was pretty Lorna Bright, the cousin of the young man, and secretly engaged to him, who persuaded me, by her protestations of Howard's innocence, to undertake so desperate a case. Old Charles Bright had driven his son from his home, because he preferred the life of a musician."

"Charles Bright was one of those cantankerous old men who are cordially hated by their neighbors. He had a big estate at Lanark, Md., to which he retired after having disposed of the business which he hoped Howard would inherit, at a price of two or three hundred thousands. Among those who hated him most strongly was Pete Jones, a small farmer whose lands he had taken when a mortgage fell due."

"Now we come to the murder. On Thanksgiving eve, 1875, the servants of the old man were aroused by a cry and the sound of a shot. They ran out of the house and saw their master lying dead with a bullet wound through his head. Some fifty yards away stood Howard, a rifle in his hands. He made no resistance and was arrested and duly committed for trial."

"As I said, gentlemen, it was Lorna Bright who insisted that I undertake her cousin's defense. She had been in the house at the time of the murder and had known no more than the servants; yet she was confident that her cousin was guiltless."

"Howard's story was that he had come home on Thanksgiving eve, to seek a reconciliation; that he had brought an old rifle he had taken away, with a view of joining his father duck shooting on the Potomac, a sport to which the old man was very partial, and in which he always used a rifle. When he was within fifty yards of the house, however, he heard a rifle discharged in the distance and saw his father, who had been standing near the door, fall forward dead.

"I was convinced of the young man's innocence by my first interview with him. I assumed that Jones was the guilty man. Jones was at this time living in a cabin about fifteen hundred yards from the site of old Bright's house. There seemed no way in which Jones could be trapped."

"All at once I had an idea. The body had not yet been buried, though the inquest was over. It occurred to me that a bullet fired at such a short range would have had velocity enough to have drilled a clean instead of a jagged hole in the head. I examined the wound and found, not only that the wound was hopelessly torn, so far as measuring its size went, but that, instead of being parallel with the earth, or horizontal, it had a downward angle of some 35 degrees."

"That discovery sent me wild with eagerness. It was easy to deduce from this that the bullet had been fired from a considerable distance. As you doubtless know, gentlemen, at all but point blank ranges the sight on the rifle is elevated, so that the ball, in its trajectory, takes first an upward and then a downward course. In other words, I had here a triangle, one angle of which measured 35 degrees, and the base line, as I surmised, about 1,500 yards—that is to say, the distance between the murdered man and Jones' cabin. The two other sides, of course, represented the ascending and the descending lines of the bullet's flight."

"The rifle, I deduced from this, must have been sighted to 1,150 yards. The district attorney consented to take a walk of inspection with me. I explained to him that I wanted to look over the ground; on the way I told him of my theory. He ridiculed the idea, but together we made our way into the swampy bottom of the dried-up rivulet. Suddenly we came upon foot tracks converging toward a single spot from either bank. I stooped and scraped up a few handfuls of earth. After a moment I came upon the rifle barrel."

"When we had disinterred it we found that it was sighted to 1,150 yards."

"That is all, gentlemen, Jones, surprised, made a complete and dramatic confession, and afterward paid the penalty of his crime. But, as I was saying, sentiment has its proper place in law, and if sentiment hadn't led me to undertake young Bright's defense he would have died a shameful death and Lorna Bright would not have been a happy wife for nearly forty years."

Abandoned Refugee Children Rescued by American Charity

There wasn't room for this group of children inside the "receiving station" at Ufa, Russia. The station was established for the special purpose of sheltering children thrown off the trans-Siberian railway in the early days of the Russian famine. Before the arrival of the American food which has broken the back of the famine, it was a common thing for desperate refugees to desert their children, hoping that someone a little more fortunate might find them and care for them.

When the American Relief Administration began work in Ufa, the ghastly figures of occupancy in the receiving station were: capacity, 300; average admissions, ten each day; average deaths, ten each day. There was a complete turnover every month!

The days of scenes like the one pictured above are over, according to ex-Governor Goodrich, of Indiana, Colonel William N. Haskell, director of the American relief work, and other competent observers. The organization under Colonel Haskell met the famine emergency to the physical limits of the transportation systems in Russia, keeping more food at the ports than the roads could move and constantly subsidizing the Soviet government to move every possible ounce.

By autumn the great natural famine will be ended, according to the latest survey of the American Relief Administration. Abnormal conditions of hunger and poverty will remain for years, but basic economic reconstruction, the remedy, according to the workers who have been in Russia under the chairmanship of Herbert Hoover.

Pest Let Loose on Country.

The gipsy moth was introduced into this country at Medford, Mass., in 1860, in connection with some experiments in hybridizing silkworms. A few specimens escaped, and about twenty years later the insect had become a serious pest. Between 1890 and 1900 the state of Massachusetts spent about a million dollars in combating the insect, which became scarce temporarily, but speedily resumed its depredations when the campaign against it was discontinued.

Inventors of Bells.

The invention of bells is attributed to the Egyptians, who are credited with having made use of percussion instruments to announce the sacred fetes of Osiris many centuries ago.

Because everything looks bright and points to certain Republican victory this fall it would be unwise for Republicans to take anything for granted. There has been many a battle lost by over-confidence. There is no better time than right now for Republican men and women to be up and doing. The convention will be held before long and the first thing we know it campaign will be on. By starting now there will be nothing left undone that should have been done.

LAWLESS IRISH YOUTH.

It may still be possible to establish the Irish Free State but the outlook can hardly be described as promising. Both Collins and Griffith are said to admit that Winston Churchill spoke "in accordance with the facts" when he recently declared in the House of Commons: "The progress of disorder, lawlessness and social degeneration has been so rapid and extensive in the twenty-six counties since the departure of the British troops and the disbanding of the Royal Irish Constabulary that the Provisional Government could not possibly guarantee securities of life and property if these securities were challenged by an active and violent Republican minority." The lawless youth of Ireland are to blame for the existing conditions, according to Katharine Tynan, a literary Irishwoman, who complains of new and worse tyrannies in her country than those for which the British were responsible.

She declares that "the violent young have snatched our Ireland from us," and is further quoted: "I should say from my experience that 90 per cent of Ireland are for peace—hungering and thirsting for peace. The remaining 10 per cent are young without responsibilities, and they have got the revolvers." Then why is not the provisional government headed by Collins strong enough to take away the "revolvers" of this small minority of lawless youth? This is what the on-looking British are doubtless inclined to ask. In their own interests, however, the British would do well to keep their hands off and let the Irish fight it out among themselves. It is up to the Irish to show whether they can establish a stable government, or whether they will permit a minority to make Ireland the home of bitter faction and ruinous anarchy. The Irish would do well to remember that the world as well as England is watching.

THE SPIRIT OF '76.

According to Dr. Mortimer L. Downer of Woodstock, the people of Kingston do not hesitate to bathe in the Hudson river even though they know that the water of the river is being used by the people of Poughkeepsie for drinking purposes. If Dr. Downer had wanted to be real smart and elude his argument, he would have added that the city of Kingston empties its sewage in the Hudson river, along with every other river city including Poughkeepsie itself, and therefore the people of Woodstock ought to cease using sanitary cesspools and instead to dump their filth in the Sawkill stream in which they and their summer boarders swim.

As health officer of the town of Woodstock, Dr. Downer recently testified in a civil suit against him in the Supreme court in this city that he had read the regulations of the state board of health relating to the duties of local health officers. Is it possible that Dr. Downer did not read any of the other regulations? Did he study only those rules which relate to bathing, and omit those which relate to pollution of water supply? With which class of rules is he best acquainted?

Because Poughkeepsie has refrained from buying land and building reservoirs and leasing adjoining lands in order to secure and maintain that kind of a supply of pure drinking water for its citizens which Kingston provides, but prefers to seek the public stream which every city may pollute with impunity. Does Dr. Downer contend that he is entitled to trespass on lands leased by the city and swim in our water supply every time he comes from a germ-infested patient and wants to "clean up"? Does the doctor fail of knowing there is a difference between private property and the public stream which everyone may use not only for navigation but also for bathing, boating and sewage disposal?

When next he visits Kingston Dr. Downer undoubtedly can point out when and where the population of Kingston and guests from other cities have been invited—may, urged—to gather at our waterfront and wade into the Hudson river just to show the people of Poughkeepsie that we are guided solely by the "Spirit of '76" which he invokes as the mastering consideration of himself and his neighbors and their boarders.

Evidently Dr. Downer's store of knowledge is not quite complete. There seems to be room for more. Where will he get it? A school geography and the regulations of the state board of health might help to some extent.

While Dr. Downer is completing his education it is the duty of the board of water commissioners of Kingston to act promptly to protect our citizens' supply of drinking water. It may not pay to wait until Dr. Downer obtains another degree. He may not want another.

Can You Answer These Questions?
1. Is it true that cockroaches will hunt bedbugs?
2. Please tell me if a snake has legs, also how to find them.
3. What is our rarest bird?

Answers in Tomorrow's Nature Notes.

Answers To Previous Questions.

1. How long does it take a peafowl's eggs to hatch?
About three weeks, similar to those of the domestic hen.

2. How is it possible for a plant to "eat" insects?

The Sundew family have glands in which is formed an acid secretion which has power to dissolve insects caught in the leaves. This secretion works out at the tips of hairs on the leaves, making them look as though damp with dew.

3. I should like to know what animal, if there is one, can live and breathe comfortably both in and out of water?

There are a number of mammals, like seals, whales, walrus, porpoises, etc., that live both in water and on land, but they get their oxygen from the air, not from water. Through various adaptations of their organs they are able to go under water and stay there some moments, but have to come up to breathe and inhale. Alligators and turtles are examples of cold-blooded creatures that also can go under for some time, but they breathe air. Frogs in the course of their career do breathe both air and water, but not in the same stage of development. Gold fishes in insufficiently aerated water will come to the top and gasp for oxygen, and can even live sometimes for as much as an hour out of water, but not "comfortably," that is, normally.

A NEWSPAPER DIFFERENT FROM THOSE NOWADAYS

Samuel D. Gibson of 77 Pearl street, has a copy of a newspaper printed in Kingston, by W. R. Champlin and S. R. Harlow, called "The Bouquet," published the third Saturday of each month. It is of date, September 18, 1862, being Volume 1, Number 8, and it is in excellent state of preservation. There are four pages, each 11 inches in length and eight and a quarter inches wide, having three columns to the page. Advertisers were W. R. Champlin who was evidently the postmaster, and J. R. Hallenbeck whose place of business was on Wall street next to "C. S. Clay's drug store." Champlin took orders for binding books and magazines, and sold sheet music, steel engravings and copies of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," novels and cheap publication. Hallenbeck kept a wholesale and retail grocery and provision store with wood and willow ware. John D. Merritt was a Daguerrean artist over Hallenbeck's store who took pictures in all weathers from 11 to 55. The paper contains a piece of poetry written for "The Bouquet" by Robert E. Best, entitled "To Kate." There is no local news in the paper, the contents being an original, continued story contributed by Willard Ray, "The Island Home," or "The Maiden of the Lake," and other literary contributions. Mr. Gibson obtained the copy of "The Bouquet" from a descendant of the Best family in Hudson.

HOW

FAMOUS COLORED CHECKS CAME TO POPULAR FAVOR.—Sir Walter Scott's black-and-white tweed trousers figured in a paper dealing with the designing and coloring of Scotch tweeds read at a textile congress held at Hawick some time ago. The famous author was one of the earliest wearers of tweed, and the first pieces were made in the black-and-white design.

Colored checks were introduced by accident. A manufacturer had a number of pieces and the white was so impure and dirty-looking that they could not be sold. Then someone suggested that if the pieces were dyed brown the defect would be covered. The suggestion was acted upon and a new check of black and brown was the result. The new color was sent to London and sold rapidly. It was a short step to dye black and green and black and blue, and to make broken checks, and the trade increased amazingly.

It was now possible for a lady to have a reversible skirt made up in such a way that she might appear at one time in a modest blue and at another in the tarran of her clan.

VICTIM OF OWN HANDIWORK

How Maker of Boston Stocks Came to Be First to Undergo the Punishment.

When Boston was a little Puritan village, the favorite mode of punishment for small misdemeanors was to place the culprit in the stocks. By a curious chance the first person to be so punished after the stocks were constructed was the carpenter who made them. The record relates that "Edward Palmer, for his extortion, taking 1 pound, 11 shillings, 7 pence for the plank and woodwork of Boston stocks, is fined 5 pounds and censured to be set an hour in the stocks."

They dealt in strange punitive measures in those days. It was the practice, in the case of persons guilty of "exhorbitancy of the tongue in railing and scolding," either to gag the offender or set him—more frequently her—in a ducking-stool to be dipped three times in some convenient pond. Another measure was to place the guilty party's tongue in a cleft stick, and in this manner to stand him up to the ridicule of the public.

How High Birds Fly.

Astronomical methods have been successfully applied to the solution of a mooted question as to the height of night flights of migrating birds. Two telescopes were placed at measured distances apart (from ten to twenty-one feet), on an east and west line, and with them two observers simultaneously watched the moon. The track of birds flying across the face of the moon were noted by each observer independently on a lunar chart, ready at his side. The tracks, being projected from separate points of observation, of course, were not identical in position and their distance apart furnished the basis for a calculation of the "parallax" of the flying birds. Two sets of observations in one case were made, in May and October. The deducted heights above the ground varied from 1,400 to 5,400 feet. The last, however, was an extreme case, most of the measures running from 1,500 to 2,500 or 3,000 feet.

How "Gophers" Are Classified.

The name "gopher," which is applied to quite a variety of creatures in various sections of the American continent, is a corruption of the French "gaufre," meaning a honeycomb. It was applied by the early French settlers to a number of burrowing animals from their habit of honeycombing the earth.

In Canada and Illinois the name is today applied to the gray burrowing squirrel and in Wisconsin to the gray striped squirrel which, in this section, is called a chipmunk. In Missouri a gopher is a brown pouched rat. In Georgia he is a snake, and in Florida he is a turtle. Minnesota is called the Gopher state from the fact that the striped squirrel was formerly found there in great numbers.

How Machine Cuts Mortar.

A special machine, which is intended for cutting out the mortar between bricks, is described with illustration in a late issue of Popular Mechanics Magazine. It consists of a small wheel which is operated at 3,500 revolutions per minute by a flexible shaft from a one-fourth horsepower electric motor. A case, partly covering the wheel, extends down to form a handle, and a safety guard is provided to protect the operator's hands from flying bits of mortar. Wheels of various thicknesses are supplied so that they may be changed to fit layers of mortar of different width.

How to Solder Aluminum.

To solder aluminum, first make a soldering bit from a piece of 1/8 or 1/4 inch round or square aluminum. Next, tin the parts to be soldered with a composition of 51 per cent tin, 16 per cent aluminum, and 3 per cent copper.

After the copper has fused, the aluminum should be added little by little, stirring the mixture thoroughly all the time. The tin and a small portion of tallow should be added. Do not overheat the composition.—Popular Science Monthly.

AFTER MILLBANK FUND FOR COUNTY

Tuberculosis Committee Reports Made and Action Planned to Secure Demonstration Money—Annual Reports—Nurse's Salary Increased.

One of the most important meetings ever held by the Ulster County Committee on the Prevention of Tuberculosis was held on Monday evening at the office of the president, Judge Joseph M. Fowler. While it was an annual meeting a great part of the time was devoted to a consideration of ways and means of securing the Millbank Fund Tuberculosis Demonstration for Ulster county. As a result the meeting was adjourned to next Monday evening at the same place and hour, when more definite action in the matter will be ready, and the election of officers will be held.

The annual report of the secretary, Dr. Mary Gage-Day, was read by her as follows:

The last annual meeting was held in September, and preliminary arrangements were made at that time for the Christmas Seal Sale. The council is again indebted to the Federation of Women's Clubs for the city management of the sale, and the Catholic Daughters of America very kindly took charge of the booths toward the close after the house-to-house canvass was completed. This was a very satisfactory arrangement.

In February the final accounting for seals was made, and showed a net result of $2,172.95.

The clinics have been continued alternating between city and county and the need for more hospital beds has been emphasized by the continuing waiting list of persons anxious to go there. So far no solution to the problem has presented itself. The public interest in the hospital has increased as shown by the action of the women's clubs and other organizations who have given entertainments for the patients. The Ulster County Garden Club has again filled the windows with lovely flower boxes and Mr. Burgevin filled the circular flower bed. These flowers add greatly to the cheerfulness of the place.

E. E. Fessenden very kindly consented to assist in the publicity work during the middle of the year and Mr. Hudson has taken up work outside of the city.

The committee had a very serious loss in the death of one of our vice-presidents, the Rev. John H. Briody. Father Briody during his association in this council, always contributed most liberally of his means for the support of the work, and in questions of policy he could always be relied upon to advocate intelligent and broad minded action. We shall miss his very valuable assistance; but will keep the spirit which he manifested to help us to carry on the work.

Cornelius Hume, the treasurer then gave an itemized report of the finances of the society, which report like Dr. Day's was accepted and ordered placed on file. The treasurer's report will first go to the auditing committee, however.

Dr. Mark O'Meara, chairman of the Committee on Visiting Nursing, next gave the following report of what Miss Elizabeth Brown, the tuberculosis visiting nurse has done the past eleven years, as follows:

Vacation period from September 1, 1921 to October 1, 1921

Attended Anniversary State Charities Aid Association, May 11 and May 12, 1922

The matter of raising the salary of Miss Brown to $125 a month was brought up and it was unanimously voted that she fully earned that amount of money and should receive the same, beginning the first of June.

Mrs. C. Reed then gave a brief report of the meetings of the fifth anniversary of the State Charities Aid Association, including "Child Placing and Mothers and Babies" Department; the big reunion dinner and "Tuberculosis and Public Health Department," held at the Ulster, New York City, May 11th and 12th.

The last matter that Mrs. Reed reported on was the Millbank Memorial Fund, portions of which are to be available for special tuberculosis demonstrations in a rural county of between 45,000 and 75,000 inhabitants; a second class city of from 75,000 to 100,000 inhabitants; and a district of a first class city of 100,000.

The Millbank fund was established by Mrs. Elizabeth Millbank Anderson of New York City and the principal amounts to $10,000,000. For the next five years between $300,000 and $400,000 annually will be available which it is intended to use in assisting not more than three demonstrations in New York cities and counties, based upon the successful experience of the Framingham Health and Tuberculosis demonstration conducted the last five years by the National Tuberculosis Association and the Home Hospital experiment conducted by the New York Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor. The purpose is to determine whether any American community with proper organization and at reasonable expense can reduce its tuberculosis death rate to a nominal minimum and to ascertain the proper organization and the per capita costs costs of such undertakings.

There is a possibility that Ulster county may secure this demonstration, which it is plain to be seen by county badly. But we will have to show that our community will want the demonstration and will heartily support the State Charities Aid Association in every possible manner if the demonstration is given to our county. That was the one requirement emphasized strongly at the New York meeting; the support and cooperation of the people of the community.

Already, Dr. Day, secretary of the Ulster County Committee on the Prevention of Tuberculosis has written

TORIES START NEW FIGHT ON PREMIER.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, June 13.—Premier Lloyd George is running this country straight into war again," declared the Morning Post, a Tory organ, in attacking the British policy on Ireland and Russia.

The Morning Post appealed for a fund for a Tory "die hard" campaign to defeat the Liberals in the next election. The Morning Post hopes to set up a Unionist or Tory government.

FRANCE INSISTS ON ULTIMATUM

No Back-down in Latest Note on Russia—Premiers To Talk Over Differences on Verdun Day.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, June 13.—Premier Lloyd George will meet Premier Poincare of France when the latter visits England for the Verdun Day ceremonies at the end of this week, and will endeavor to smooth out the latest differences that have arisen between the two countries, it was learned this afternoon.

Whitehall is withholding comment on the latest French note, but there is a strong belief that the obstructionist attitude of France will shorten The Hague conference.

The latest French note was delivered last night and insisted that the allies should serve an ultimatum upon Russia, demanding restoration of seized property, recognition of private property rights, recognition of the imperial debts and other guarantees.

Paris, June 13.—Despite previous announcement that France would not participate actively in The Hague conference, a council of ministers today decided to send a committee of experts to the Dutch capital for the international conference.

CHILDREN'S DAY AT THE ST. JAMES M. E. CHURCH.

In spite of the threatening weather on Sunday morning the large and numerous children of the St. James Methodist Episcopal Church were filled. The adult class alone numbered almost one hundred. A very large platform was erected for the exercises, and this was decorated in the most tasteful manner with great masses of flowers, art flower baskets being used with fine effect. A whole truck load of laurel was brought to the church on Saturday afternoon. So large is the primary department that it filled the stage and the children proved to be far more attractive than even the flowers. The music was superb, led by Mr. Kearney as chorister and Harry Dodge as organist, supplemented by piano and also a ten piece orchestra.

The audience was large, interested and generous. The children took their many parts in a manner that showed excellent training. Probably the church never looked finer than this year. St. James' Sunday school is growing all the time.

SPRING PARADE

"We're here," said the wild geese. "We have come to join the spring parade."

"Of course we do not all come together, for you know that is not the way in a parade."

"The different kinds of creatures are in different parts and sections of the parade."

"And the ones belonging together usually go together. So we're the wild geese section of the parade."

"Yes," said Mistress Spring. "I like to sit in the Spring grandstand and have all my dear friends pass me in the parade."

"I move my grandstand about, too, so I can see those who like to parade in the woods and those who like to parade near the marshes and brooks."

"Let me see. Who are coming next?"

"Here we are," chirped the robins. "We're in the spring parade."

"Of course you are, you darlings," said Mistress Spring.

"We're in the spring parade," said the red-winged blackbirds.

"Glad to see you," said Mistress Spring.

"You're great friends of mine," she added.

"Here we are," said the fox sparrows.

"Good," said Mistress Spring.

"And you've noticed us, we hope," said the crackles.

"Yes, indeed," said Mistress Spring.

"We're here," said the spring peepers, as Mistress Spring moved her

DISHES FOR OCCASIONS

As everybody likes chicken the following dish will be one that can be served to a large company.

Chicken a la King.—Melt two tablespoons of butter; in it cook one-fourth of a pound of fresh mushrooms, peeled and broken in pieces, one-half a green pepper cut in shreds, stir and cook until the moisture is evaporated somewhat. In another saucepan melt two tablespoons of butter, in it cook three tablespoons of flour, one-half teaspoonful of salt and one-fourth of a teaspoonful of paprika; add one cupful of this cream and one cupful of hot chicken broth and stir until boiling; cream two tablespoons of butter, beat two egg yolks one at a time and stir into the sauce, continue to stir without boiling until the egg is set; add the mushrooms and pepper and the hot breast of a chicken cut in pieces one inch square, with a teaspoonful of lemon juice and a few drops of onion juice. Serve in timbale cases.

Timbale Cases.—Beat two eggs slightly, with one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt, add, alternately, one cupful of milk and one cupful of flour, beat until the mixture is smooth throughout. Have ready a kettle of hot fat; set the timbale iron into the fat and when hot dip the iron into a half cupful of the batter, not allowing the batter to come up over the top. Return to the hot fat dipping the iron until well covered, cook for half a minute, tilt the iron to remove the fat and drain the cases on paper. Keep them hot in a dripping pan set in the oven. These may be made the day before and crisped in the oven before using.

Lobster in Rice Border.—Heat cubes of lobster meat in a white sauce. Serve in a border of rice, set one and one-half cupfuls of stock with one stewed and strained tomato over the fire. When boiling add one cupful of rice and one-half teaspoonful of salt. Stir occasionally with a fork until the liquid is absorbed. Add one-half cupful of butter and cook over hot water until tender.

Beautiful Ceylon.

Drowning in the Indian ocean, and about three times as large as our state of New Jersey, lies the beautiful tropical island of Ceylon, an island of Asia, known as far back as the time of the ancient Greeks and Romans but conquered by Great Britain in 1796 and now one of her colonies, ruled by a governor chosen by the crown. Its name means "the Island of Lions," but in its jungles today wild elephants live and roam at will.

Rose Cold Victims Don't Like June

Tuesday Health Talk No. 97.

Along in the month of June when roses bloom and the bride marches to the altar, comes a pernicious trouble known as "rose cold" because it comes when the roses are in bloom and the hay fever, affects the air passages.

Rose cold is a forerunner of hay fever. Those who suffer from rose cold are invariably victims of hay fever a little later in the season. Now it is agreed by all authorities that rose cold is a sub-normal condition of the air passages and can only be eliminated by "stepping-up" the vigor and tone of the nerve cells and tissues. This is naturally done by chiropractic spinal adjustments. No other way to restore nerve impulses in any given portion of the body is known. That is why chiropractic succeeds where everything else has failed, both in this disease and in hay fever.

CAUSE IS REMOVED.

"Being the victim of rose cold and hay fever for many years, and having tried many different treatments with no result, in fact the trouble seemed to get worse, I was skeptical when I tried chiropractic, but on my oath I testify that I was entirely relieved."—G. J. White, Research Bureau Statement No. 1272H.

COLLINS EXPECTS QUICK AGREEMENTS

By Telegram to The Freeman.

London, June 13.—"I am entirely satisfied with the way things are going," declared Michael Collins after an interview with Colonial Secretary Winston Churchill this afternoon.

Collins arrived from Dublin during the morning for a conference with the representatives of the British on Irish constitutional amendments. Following the initial conference with Secretary Churchill, the famous Irish leader appeared in a most optimistic frame of mind.

"I am not worried and I am satisfied that everything will turn out well," added Collins. "That is all I can say now."

Collins, while nominally minister of finance in the provisional government of the Irish Free State, is really "the strong man of Dublin."

GOOD FOR "SWELLED HEAD"

Man Who Imagines He Is Thoroughly Well Known Should "Listen In" Occasionally.

There is a gorgeous lesson in humility to be obtained at almost every dinner party for the man who imagines that he has jumped through the hoop into the public eye. He may have climbed half way up Parnassus in his work as a scientist, an explorer, a politician, a soldier, an architect, a painter, a novelist or a playwright, or even have arrived at the tip-top and be sitting there dangling his feet. It does not matter. There are always plenty of people going about who daily discover to him the fact that his name means nothing—or something else. "Swinnerton?" I heard once from one of those women who always carries a dog and maintains a husband to give it exercise. "Isn't he the man who invented the Yale lock, or is it a town in Iowa?" and another time, at a bridge table on board a liner, a girl caught up the name of Shackleton. "I always use his racquets," she said with triumph. And the year before last at Bar Harbor I heard Conrad praised for having devised that very nice soap that floats in the bath. How good for the soul! exclaims Cosmo Hamilton, writing in the Spur.

I remember also a first-hand lesson in the utter aloofness of people from the things that seem to matter. At a dinner party again. The hostess, one of the dowagers of New York, a charming and enterprising old lady whose house has not been altered since the days of crinolines, and who heatedly denied that the people in "The Age of Innocence" had been drawn from life. She had been taken the evening before to see a play of mine that was running and, by a strange accident, running well, at a Broadway theater. She told me all about it. She said, "I had such a pleasant evening. You really must make an effort to see that play. I cannot remember the name of it or at which theater it was. I cannot remember the names of any of the actors. I never can. And of course, I haven't the remotest idea who wrote it—I never read the program. But I strongly recommend it to you. It's so amusing." I identified it as mine presently when, going into further details, the dowager mentioned how particularly pleased she had been with a stuffed wildcat that stood on the mantelpiece in the last act. It is not an easy thing to suffer from swelled head these days. A pity, because it adds to the dwindling sources of merriment that have survived the great war.

Trade That Touches All.

We always look to George E. Roberts of the National City bank to put things clearly. He told the Export Managers' club at their recent meeting in New York what had happened to the world and gave a pat and pertinent illustration, says the Nation's Business.

Russia, he said, was one of the great tea-drinking countries of the world. India was one of the great tea producers. The war stopped Russia from her tea drinking and India couldn't sell her tea. India is a great cotton wearing country, but if she couldn't sell her tea she couldn't buy cotton, so the mills of Manchester were shut down. If England's mills were not running our Southern farmers could not sell their cotton and they in turn shut down on buying.

What is true of tea and cotton is true in a greater or less degree of the hundreds and thousands of things that make up our daily life. The Australian market for shoes affects the mill towns of New England and the fashion in stockings in Argentina is reflected in the pay roll of a Philadelphia worker.

Metal Largely Replacing Wood.

Our ancestors of one or two hundred years ago in America lived in an age of wood. No metal chairs, no metal filing cases, no brass beds were to be found in home or office. Wooden wagons prevailed and wooden farm machinery, faced or reinforced, to be sure, with metal, but chiefly of wood. Yarn was spun with wooden spinning wheels and looms chiefly of wood wove the yarn.

Substitutes for wood in the past half century, however, have revolutionized construction of buildings, bridges and sidewalks. Altogether, substitutes for wood have reduced our wood consumption about one-third. In most instances this is all very well, marking progress in civilization.

Seems Reasonable.

Mrs. Ponderosa—Your reducing treatment has been highly recommended, but your terms are frightfully steep!

Dr. Stimulus—That's an important part of the treatment. After paying my fee in advance you won't have enough money left to buy much rich, fattening food.

FAMINE FACES LONDONDERRY

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Belfast, June 13.—Londonderry today is facing famine as the result of the cutting off of the usual lines of food supplies for the city.

Supplies are being sent there from Glasgow, but these are insufficient.

Incendiaries were again active in Belfast and a large factory was destroyed by fire.

In some districts south of the Ulster line, Protestants are said to have been ordered out of their homes to make room for Catholic refugees from Ulster province.

Sponge Fisheries.

There are large sponge fisheries along the shores of Greece, certain parts of the Adriatic sea, as well as on the coasts of Tripoli and Tunis; but the world's best sponges come from Syria. In the well-equipped fisheries the divers go down into the sea for the sponges, dressed in cork jackets, or by means of diving bells; but, in many places they descend from boats, to pull the sponges from the rocks; for as long a time as they can remain under water. Long tridents are sometimes used to dislodge the sponges, but this practice is apt to tear the soft structures and injure them. Hand picking is the usual method. After being gathered, the sponges are well beaten and washed, to rid them of the black coating and jelly-like substance which cling to them. Finally, they are bleached, graded, packed, and shipped to all parts of the world.

Old Theory Exploded.

It is commonly believed that the great temple of Karnak was built by the ancient Egyptians so that the sun at the precise moment of the solstice should shine straight down the axis of the temple. But the Egyptian survey has made accurate measurements of the temple and proves that the sun has never been visible at all, at any moment in any day in any year along the axis of the temple, since about 6000 B. C., and that it last set along the central line of this axis between twelve thousand and thirteen thousand years ago. "At this date," says the Scientific American, "Europe was still in the Old Stone Age; the cave period was at its zenith, and the hunters of the Dordogne were chasing reindeer over the French tundras. To suppose that the temple of Karnak can have been built then is out of the question."

Great Composer Married Cousin.

The wife of John Sebastian Bach, the great German composer, who was also his cousin, was as unlettered as the ordinary young lady of her station and day, and there is doubt as to her ability even to read and write. But she was intelligent in music, and for this reason made an excellent companion for her illustrious husband. Her maiden name was the same as his, and the two inherited their musical predisposition from a line of musical Bachs, extending back over 200 years. Bach was on tour with the court orchestra at the time of his wife's death, and the news of it gave his unromantic, unemotional nature what is probably the greatest shock it ever received. For a time he was heartbroken, but the wound healed, and he remarried not long afterward.

Hobbies.

One stride made by the modern mind, both in philosophy and ethics, is that of doing justice to the hobby. Hobbies not infrequently assume a scientific or at least a quasi-scientific form. Happy is the man who is an amateur botanist, an amateur zoologist, an amateur anything, which brings him into kindly contact with nature. Take it by and large, the world is much better off for hobbies than it would be without them. Even in the tolerant and half-plying smile bestowed on the hobbyist there is recognition that his hobby is harmless. But in one hundred and ninety-nine cases out of a thousand, the hobby is a positive benefit. Almost always it is a health-preserver, and more times than it gets credit for it has proven a life saver.—Buffalo Times.

First Christmas Card.

A stationer has reminded the "Wag of the World" columnist of the London Morning Post that the first Christmas card was published more than seventy-five years ago. This beautiful token of remembrance and friendship, writes the columnist, was invented by Sir Henry Cole, who, in 1846, asked J. C. Horsley, R. A., to design a popular Christmas greeting to be materialized as a card transmissible through the penny post. A trellis of rustic work in the Germanesque style divided the card into a center and two side panels. The sides were filled by representations of the feeding of the hungry and the clothing of the naked. Of the first Christmas card a thousand copies were sold.

The Worthy Amateur.

There is no excuse for amateur work being bad. Amateurs often excuse their shortcomings on the ground that they are not professionals, the professional could plead with greater justice that he is not an amateur. The question is, what is the amateur an amateur of? What is he really in love with? Is he in love with other people, thinking he sees something which he would like to show them? . . . If this is his position he can do no wrong, the spirit in which he works will insure that his defects will be only as bad spelling or bad grammar in the pretty saying of a child.—Samuel Butler.

26TH INFANTRY EXPECTED HERE

Spent Sunday in Newburgh and Leave There This Morning—Will Camp in Vicinity of Kingston Wednesday Night—On Way to Plattsburg.

The Infantry regiments that have been in camp in Camp Dix for some time have been assigned to other locations, as permanent posts, and the Twenty-sixth Regiment is now on a hike from Camp Dix to Plattsburg, and will camp in the vicinity of Kingston this Wednesday evening.

The district between Camp Dix and Plattsburg is to be traversed by the command passing over the state roads. On Friday night the soldiers camped at Suffern, and Saturday at Harristown. Sunday night was spent in Newburgh and the soldiers left that city this morning.

The regiment is making about fifteen miles a day, and this evening will camp in the vicinity of Highland leaving there Wednesday morning and arriving in the vicinity of Kingston that evening. The local post office has received word to hold all mail for the regiment at the central office here.

Just where they will camp in this vicinity is not known as yet.

The commanding officer of the 26th Regiment is a former Newburgh young man, Lieutenant Colonel William L. Reed, son of the late Rev. John J. Reed, who was for several years pastor of Trinity Church in Newburgh and later was assigned to the Methodist Church in Yonkers. In 1896 he was pastor of Trinity M. E. Church on Wurts street this city.

Other officers of the regiment accompanying the men are Major J. L. Burg, second in command; Captain Burton F. Reed, adjutant; Captain Gordon C. Irwin, in charge of plans and training; Captain George W. Glover, supply officer; Captain Otto Christiansa, surgeon. There are 20 officers, 640 enlisted men, 33 animals, 12 Liberty trucks. In addition the regiment has an excellent band of 40 pieces. Warrant Officer Hirschenow leader. This band delights in rendering a high class musical program whenever opportunity offers.

When the United States went into the World War the Twenty-sixth Regiment was among the first to land on French soil in 1917, taking part in nearly all of the major engagements, during which the loss in killed and wounded was very great.

For the regiment's daring and excellent work performed, the French government caused it to be cited on two occasions and collectively decorated with the honor emblem. In addition a number of the officers and men were individually cited and decorated. Under the provision for regimental decoration, all members of the command are now privileged to wear the decoration of valor.

MISS HINCHLEY SUCCESSFUL AT GROVE CITY COLLEGE

The Grove City College Collegian of May 29, contains a lengthy report of the Annual May Pageant of which the following is an extract:

"No more gorgeous spectacle has ever been presented by the girls of Grove City College than the May Pageant of last Friday. The enthusiastic crowd pronounced it the finest pageant which had ever been presented in Grove City College. Its success was largely due to the untiring efforts of Miss Marietta Hinchley, physical director of the young women, and Mrs. Lois Corry Thompson, dean of women. The music was provided by Dr. Poehlmann and his orchestra.

The proceeds are to go to the Eaglesmere fund of the Y. W. C. A. to provide part of the expense of delegates to the Y. W. C. A. "summer camp."

Miss Hinchley was formerly physical director of girls in Kingston High School and grade schools, and her many friends here will be pleased to hear of her success in her new and larger field of physical training directed in Grove City College, Grove City, Pa.

JUDGE VAN WYCK'S LAST GREAT CASE HERE

Received $500 Per Day in "Bath House" Litigation.

Judge Augustus Van Wyck, who last week died at the Hahnemann Hospital, and whose career was referred to in Friday's Freeman, tried his last great case in Ulster county at the March, 1921, term of the supreme court, held by Justice Rosch. It was the celebrated bath house case of Frederick W. Terwilliger against Browning, King and Company, arising out of the eviction of Terwilliger from the Turkish bath establishment maintained by him in the property of Browning, King and Company on Broadway in the city of New York. Browning, King and Company who are the large ready-made clothing people, had rented the bathing establishment in the basement of their building at the junction of Broadway and Sixth avenue, to Terwilliger. They claimed he did not pay his rent, that he owed them several thousand dollars, and they evicted him, whereupon he sued them for damages for the eviction, and the disruption of his bath establishment. The case was twice tried, first before Judge Howard and a jury at the March term of the supreme court in 1919, when Terwilliger recovered the largest verdict ever given by a jury in this county, it being for $141,000, to which Judge Howard added an extra allowance of $1,000. The defendants appealed to the Appellate Division which reversed the judgment and ordered a new trial. The case was tried for the second time before Judge Rosch and a jury, as above stated, the trial taking ten days, the jury returning a verdict for Browning, King and Company v. Terwilliger, the entire litigation Judge Van Wyck conducted the case for Terwilliger, the attorney of record being Abraham Feinstein, with whom was associated Paul F. Lorrer and Judge Jenkins. Judge Clearwater conducted the case for Browning, King and Company, their attorney of record being Charles P. Northrop. On both trials Judge Van Wyck conveyed the impression of being one of the ablest, most astute and resourceful lawyers who ever had appeared in the Ulster bar, and he appeared to be fully as vigorous as he was twenty years before when he ran for governor and stamped the state against Theodore Roosevelt. Having been president of the Holland Society, he had many acquaintances and friends in Ulster county, in fact two members of the Holland Society were on the jury, but that situation probably was balanced by the fact that Judge Clearwater also had been president of that society. Judge Van Wyck's death was a great shock to his friends here, who had not heard of his illness. It was understood here that the Judge received $500 a day for every day he spent in the court room in the Terwilliger-Browning case.
